

Newell Brands (NWL)

Sector – Consumer Goods

Industry – Consumer Discretionary/Staples

Business Description

Newell Brands (NWL) is a global consumer goods company with a portfolio of 50+ brands, 25 of which make up 90% of sales. Revenues are broken down into 3 main segments: Home & Commercial Solutions (52% of FY25 revs), Learning & Development (38%), and Outdoor & Recreation (10%). Wholesale accounts for 60% of revenue, with independent distributors (25%) and DTC (15%) making up the rest. 60% of revenues are earned in the US, and 42 plants across the globe support a dynamic supply chain.

Investment Thesis

NWL is executing its 2nd restructuring in 6 years, trimming its brand portfolio from 80+ names to ~55. Paired with macro headwinds, revenues and FCF have faced downward pressure, triggering underperformance and ratings downgrades. Refining operations, NWL has consolidated 23 standalone supply chains into one, reduced suppliers by 25%, and reduced E&O inventory by 50% since 2023, when CEO Chris Peterson took over.

These changes have been reflected in the financial statements as gross margin climbed 490 bps to 33.8%, and Net Leverage has decreased to 5.47x from 6.44x over that same period. As NWL continues to rebuild, we expect FCF and margins to continue improving, providing a compelling investment.

Bond Selection

- $750 mm 6.375% senior notes due 2030 offer liquidity relative to other NWL bonds.
- The note trades wide of the B+ and B curve at 266 bps, offering an attractive return.
- NWL 2030 trades 126 bps wide of competitor CENT's (B1/BB/BB) 2030 senior note.

NWL Issuer Curve

Background

NWL's current high leverage stems from the majority debt-financed $15.3B acquisition of Jarden in 2016. The purchase expanded its portfolio from 28 to 100+ brands. To finance the deal, NWL issued $8B in senior notes and a $1.5B term loan. CEO Michael Polk aimed to integrate Jarden's holding company structure into a single operating company on a centralized system, but he struggled to consolidate operations. In 2018, NWL launched the "Accelerated Transformation Plan" to divest brands and reduce debt amid shareholder pressure. The program targeted $10+B in post-tax proceeds but generated only $6.1B from five brand sales.

In 2021, NWL announced Project Ovid to simplify operations, looking to merge 23 independent supply chains into 1 centralized system. Operational gains from this were offset by the "Innovation Operating Model" which encouraged brands to launch new products to fill shelf space, which resulted in 50% of SKUs generating 2% of FY23 sales. Current CEO Chris Peterson took over in May 2023 and launched Project Phoenix to focus on reducing the portfolio and streamlining operations.

Recent Developments

- FY25 results for Newell Brands were mixed. Shifting tariffs added $174mm in costs, which management attempted to offset through onshoring production, supply chain adjustments, and three rounds of pricing changes on April 1st, May 1st, and July 28th.
- Core sales declined 4.6% despite successful launches in the baby and pen markets.
- Amazon was the top customer (17% of sales) and Walmart remained second (13%).
- Two major brands, Contigo (~11% market share) and Yankee Candle (~29% market share), are slated for relaunches in FY26 after recent performance struggles.
- Graco (~18% market share) and Sharpie (~50%) continue to be top-performing brands after successful product launches in FY25.

- On 10/29/2024 NWL issued $750mm for notes due in 2030 and $500mm for notes due in 2032. Issuance was to redeem notes due in FY25 and part of the FY26 notes.
- On 5/8/2025 NWL issued $1.25B in 2028 notes to redeem the remaining FY26 notes.
- 2Q25 issuance was 4x oversubscribed, signaling investor demand for NWL debt.
- The 2030/32 notes received 50 bps of step-ups from Moody's and S&P downgrades.

- NWL's leverage has remained elevated, with Net Debt/EBITDA peaking in FY23 at 6.44x, and I expect them to continue deleveraging through FY28E.
- NWL must meet a Fixed Charge Coverage Ratio of 2x to issue new debt
- Cross Default Provision: If NWL hits 6.5x leverage, their revolver accelerates.
- The debt cushion is $651mm, and the EBITDA cushion is 12% ($100mm).

Debt Distribution

- Significant debt wall in FY27/28 with $1.75B due in notes along with expiring RCF.
- Refinancing is expected to be necessary given declining FCF and revenues.

Capital Allocation

- Dividends have reduced over the past 3 years, with management committed to giving $0.28/share a year in dividends; no share repurchases since 2022.
- Management has publicly committed to returning to 2.5x net leverage; no timeframe has been associated with deleveraging.

- NWL trades ~60 bps wide of Cons. Discretionary B+ curve, and right on the B- curve.
- Elevated leverage & weak FCF fuel spread, but high coupon reduces mod. duration.
- SPB 2031s were tendered in May 2024, leading to the inflated OAS.

- We are not pitching NWL as an upgrade candidate, but as revenues stabilize and operations continue to improve, they will approach upgrade triggers over the next few years.

Management

CEO and President – Chris Peterson (59)

- Joined NWL in 2018 as CFO, promoted to President (2022) and CEO (May 2023).
- Previous COO of Operations at Revlon Inc., and 20 years at Procter & Gamble as VP.
- Earned BS in Operations Research & Industrial Engineering from Cornell University.

CFO – Mark Erceg (55)

- Joined in January 2023, moving from working as CFO at Cerner Corporation.
- 10 years of prior CFO work at Tiffany & Co., Canadian Pacific Rail, and Masonite Int.
- Holds a BS in Accounting and MBA in Finance from Indiana University; CFA member.

Risks

- As the restructuring nears completion, expected margin gains don't materialize.
- K-shaped economy threatens sales as lower-income consumers reduce spending.
- Scheduled product launches dilute margins, as seen in early 2020's.
- Expected refinancing leads to higher interest costs and unfavorable credit terms.

Moody's Liquidity Analysis

Liquidity analysis

Newell's SGL-3 speculative grade liquidity rating reflects the company's adequate liquidity with a covenant that steps down and will be tight if Newell does not reduce leverage. Liquidity is supported by our expectation for free cash flow to turn positive in 2026 of at least $100 million, no debt maturities over the next 12 months, and roughly $700 million of availability on the $1.0 billion asset-based revolver due August 2027. Newell also has an accounts receivable facility expiring in October 2026 that provides additional liquidity of up to $225 million between February and April of each year and up to $275 million at all other times. As of 30 September 2025, the company had availability of approximately $140 million under this facility ($135 million outstanding). Liquidity will weaken if the company does not proactively address the revolver expiration and the maturity of $500 million of notes that are due in September 2027.

In February 2024, Newell amended its unsecured revolving credit facility expiring August 2027 by changing it into an asset based secured revolver and reducing the commitment amount to $1 billion from $1.5 billion. The amendment also eliminated the prior minimum interest coverage and maximum debt to capital covenants and implemented two new covenants. These covenants include a maximum net debt-to-EBITDA leverage ratio (as per credit agreement definition) currently at 6.5x starting 3Q 2025, and 5.25x starting 3Q 2026. The covenant net leverage ratio was 5.7x as of 30 September 2025. Additionally, there is a minimum asset coverage test requirement of greater than 1.05x pledged assets to borrowings, which was 4.0x as of 30 September 2025. We expect the company to have adequate cushion under these two financial covenants but the step downs in the maximum leverage ratio will require a reduction in leverage to maintain compliance.
